GENUINE GOOD WILL

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

We came to know The New Outlook magazine just recently through special service it has been rendering in the mighty struggle for freedom of speech in Toronto. Under the keen and courageous leadership of its editor, Reverend William B. Creighton, it has launched a campaign to strike against those blind and ingrained forces of suppression which would keep Toronto in darkened Mediævalism. Whatever opposition it has met the fray and has been a veritable fusillade of telling editorials against the bigotry of fanaticism that seeks to dominate the thought and feeling of Canadian citizens. Its scathing exposition of the Toronto Labour Temple attack, struck us as being one of the finest and noblest pieces of writing we have viewed by the present controversy. "Most of the leading daily papers of Toronto," writes the editor, under the title "A Danger to Peace," "in their comment engaged in one of the strangest campaigns that any newspapers ever waged against what it pleased to call the 'Red' menace in our midst. By every argument it can conjure up, from facts or supposed facts, from history or from imagination, it is making out case to the effect that any one who might in any way threaten the Constituted Order is well to be feared and incite all sorts of violence and mixed against them. And any one who would dare to suggest, even meekly and mildly, that a Communist might be a citizen with a few undeniable rights is set down by community and some of these people that is to be a good fairly right minded people, can get themselves into a mood in which they become exponents of any such gospel of hate as finds utterance in these cases cited, is extremely difficult to understand."

The foregoing words, unequivocal, lucid and fearless, must be remembered were written not in the indictment "Red" dogmatism of "wicked communism" but in the Reverend Dr. W. B. Creighton's characterization of Haldeman-Julius virulent "Freedom" and the Western Press use of "The New Outlook," the official organ of the United Church of Canada. Once again the United Church takes the lead in putting the right.

In this, however, but scarce is perhaps to the real interest of our readers this week. We furnish a preface as a background for what is to follow. We want to establish in the minds of our readers the kind of publication and the kind of editor whose words we wish further to quote. It is out of such liberality of spirit and breadth of vision as prompted the courage and earnestness of what appears above editorially, that a forward movement be founded, even in these climatic, and themselves unfettered, soulless as Good Will.

The week following the appearance of the editorial has witnessed attention having thus been called to this publication, we were delighted to read the following under the caption, "For a Wider Brotherhood." It says, "Perhaps we are justified in saying that it is the one fact that Roman Catholics, Jews and Protestants do not get on together in any too friendly way. It is true that they do not often quarrel among themselves, but that is chiefly due to the fact that they care about as little as do well one another as is possible."

It then describes the recent activities of the National Conference of Jews and Christians which believes "that greater friendship between the groups, and a better understanding of each other, would be most desirable and might be the means of accomplishing some worth while ends and purposes." In view of the war fear most of these meetings "have generally consisted those who have been per se been and seem a point for war as a far of better things." The editor very wisely asks "Is it not possible that the thing which is being attempted in the United States needs doing in Canada quite as much and might work out to a splendid success?" "In the public and misunderstanding has been as great might and might be the means of accomplishing some worth while ends and purposes." In view of the war fear most of these meetings "have generally consisted those who have been per se been and seem a point for war as a far of better things." The editor very wisely asks "Is it not possible that the thing which is being attempted in the United States needs doing in Canada quite as much and might work out to a splendid success?" Deaths

Wednesday, February 11, David Spector, J.P., died in his 81st year. Mr. Spector was a native of Austria and came to Montreal about 40 years ago to take up business as a dry goods merchant. He retired from business about 25 years ago, and has since been identified with Jewish charitable organizations. He was a life governor of Baron de Hirsch Institute, and an organizer and president for many years of the Beth Jacob Congregation. Mr. Spector was also an active member of the Austrian-Hungarian Synagogue. He was the first secretary of the Zionist Federation of Canada. He is survived by two sons, Dr. Simon Spector and Marcus M. Spector, K.C., of Montreal and two daughters, Mrs. Esther Bloc, of Vienna, Austria and Mrs. C. J. Hines, of Montreal. The funeral took place from his home, 4191 Westmount avenue, at 2 p.m. to Shaare Hashomayim Cemetery, Friday, February 13.

Detective J. S. Kellert died at his home Saturday morning, February 14 after a short illness. Hundreds of friends gathered at the residence, 1019 St. Catherine street west. The body was taken to the Shaar Hashomayim cemetery for burial.

The service was conducted by Rabbi H. Abramowitz. The chief mourners were the widow, May Carole-James, two sons, Ernest and Bernard, a brother Abraham Kellert, of Antwerp, and three sisters, Mrs. H. Freedman, Mrs. J. Leytham and Mrs. H. Weisfeld.

Detective Kellert, who had many cases to his credit was engaged in his profession up to within a few months ago, when he was stricken. He was born in Russia and came to Canada as a child. He was often employed by the Government of the day on important cases. He was one of the first to operate a private detective agency in Canada.

In his youth Detective Kellert received his training from Pahey, who in his day was considered the leading detective. It was after Pahey died that Kellert first opened his own private agency. In those days he handled cases, in which notorious United States swindlers, bank robbers and confidence men became his quarry and were in most cases sent to the penitentiary through his efforts.

For several years he was employed by the United States private detective bureaus as their Canadian representative. Kellert's office used to be a little wooden building situated on the old Mechanics Institute site, Dorchester street. One of the most difficult cases ever handled by him was that of Jos Bailey, who was accused of almost every crime in the political calendar. This case placed in his hands when Bailey was accused of counterfeiting and passing counterfeit money. Bailey managed to get away into the United States, and it was there that he succeeded in killing a cop. Kellert hunted him and kept up the chase until he caught him in Rouses Point. Though he was extradited on account of the murder he was finally let go.

Gabriel Dallaire de Sola, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dallaire L. de Sola, of Montreal, and younger brother of the late Dallaire L. de Sola, who died suddenly here on Tuesday, February 17, died Tuesday in London, England. Mr. de Sola was taken ill a few weeks before with appendicitis and developed peritonitis and pleurisy. He was 28 years of age.

Born in Montreal, Mr. de Sola received his early education here. He left Montreal with his mother and other members of the family, shortly after the death of his father, and settled in London.

The funeral was held on Thursday at the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue in London.

Mr. de Sola is survived by his mother; one brother, Raphael, and two sisters, Jessica and Esther.

Dr. Milton Silver, of California, died last week, leaving his wife, Hedwig Heilig, formerly of Montreal, and two children.

BNAI BRITH HEARS TORONTO RABBI

Centuries of changing contacts have not availed to efface individual characteristics of the Jews. Even though some may deny the pull of thousands of years of spiritual creativeness which forms the background of Jewish life and outwardly break away, they cannot lie to their own souls. This triumph and tragedy, weakness and strength of the Jew formed the basis of an address, "Out of the Past," by Rabbi Samuel Sachs, of Congregation Goel Tzedek, Toronto, before members of the Bnai Brith Lodge No. 729 in the Mount Royal Hotel Thursday night, February 12.

Rabbi Sachs gave reasons for the rejection of the Jews by the world at large. Assimilation, he pointed out, was suicidal, and no solution of the problem, for it was not rational for any individual to respect those who had no respect for themselves. It is this attempt indeed that is one of the basic reasons for the great dislike with which the majority of the Jews are viewed, he said.

Just as the Germans are noted for their stolidarity of purpose, the French for their romanticism, and the Hellenic nationalities for their artistic aptitude, so must the Jew be looked upon in the light of the prophet, the psalmist and the long line of teachers who kept away from the turmoil of the market place, Rabbi Sachs said, disproving by numerous references that the Jew is a materialist rather than an idealist.

Although today it appears that the Jew despises the idealistic qualities, it is not a Jewish characteristic, Rabbi Sachs contended. "We are only aping others when we boast of material successes, and our very actions prove that the garment fits none too well. Why, then, are we so boastful in parading these triumphs? Men to the manner born are not so self-conscious." The solution then for partial elimination of the current inherent dislike of the Jews by most nationalities, he believed, was the throwing off of the artificiality that so ill becomes them.

"Let us live our own lives in the spirit of the great past, for by so doing we do not have to put ourselves against the spirit of the age. We reject our own heritage and sell it for a mess of pottage, which is an unnatural proceeding.

The Jewish problem is both historical and psychological. The past is stamped on their very souls, and neither time nor place can blur their individuality for a man cannot leave his Jewishness even by forsaking his religion.

If the Jew then was to be rejected both for his Jewishness and for his backsliding, Rabbi Sachs said, it was best for him to retain his distinct characteristics with the admiration that must ensue for his steadfastness of purpose instead of being despised for his delinquencies.

In closing, the speaker admonished the Bnai Brith members to live up to the three names which their organization stood for, viz., Hebrew, Israelite and Jew. "Hebrew stands for courage of conviction, Israelite represents the fighter who fought nobly throughout the centuries for all that he held most dear, and Jew reminds us that we are connected with the kingdom of Judaea. Wherever we may be, we are still Jews and indissolubly bound up with our homeland. Its rehabilitation is our task, and we must not sever our connection with it, for it is the hope of the Jews of the future."

J. Kindestin, president, was in the chair.

Organizations and individuals are invited to send their news in to the Montreal office of the Canadian Jewish Review.

Address Delivery by Rabbi Berger at Synagogue Masonic Service

As the synagogue to-day is symbolic of Israel's Temple of the past, so is your presence here symbolic of the Temple of Humanity of the future which our Fraternity purposes to build.

The Temple of Humanity of the future which looms lofty and majestic before my mind's eye is one not constructed of iron, brass, brick and mortar: it is not one decorated with designs of gold and silver: it is not one, confined to location or space. It is one that defies boundaries and limitations of any kind: it is one made of spiritual and yet practical substance; it is one decorated with Heaven's jewels: it is one which has the starry sky as the roof; the vast stretch of entire earth as the pavement; man's righteous deeds as the pillars.

There are many steps between the pavement and the starry sky. But, among the many steps, I see three outstanding ones: one bear the inscription Faith: the secon has the word, Truth: the thir spells Relief.

No one may expect to approac that Temple, except by these thre steps — Faith, Truth, Relief. H who laughs at Faith: he who dev ates the path of Truth: he wh closes his eyes to Relief, is shutting out moral music from his soul, and humanizing tendencies from his heart, and uplifting principles from his home.

On the other hand, he who is happy with his faith: he, who follows the path of truth: he who sows in his heart the seeds of benevolence — he, indeed, possesses a sense of the dignity of human nature: he, indeed, translates into action the thought well expressed by the poet who said:

"A thing of beauty is a joy for ever;
Its loveliness increases; it will never Pass to nothingness".

If ever there was an age which had the need for Masonic teaching: if ever there was an age which had the need for the light which Masonry sheds on the road of even the uninitiated: if ever there was an age which had the need for lessons in inner beauty, and lasting joy, and increasing loveliness, this is the age.

If anything, to-day, requires emphasis, it is the scene which Masonry has prophesied for centuries. What is this scene which Masonry has prophesied for ages? It is a scene which shows the removal of all barriers for ages? It is a scene which shows the removal of all barriers that divides: a scene which shows the removal of all bigotries that blinds: a scene which shows the removal of all bitterness that beclouds: a scene which prompts one and all to ask

"Not; What is your creed?
But, What is your need?"

A scene which will reveal a vast change of heart, — a change of heart that must take place in the entire world: a change of heart by reason of an exchange of thought and courtesy and a closer personal touch; a change of heart that will bring about healthy conditions in the social and industrial life of humanity: conditions that will not shake England to-day: or make France tremble to-morrow: or alarm America next week: conditions that will rather create an atmosphere of mutual recognition and respect; that will bring men of every rank and walk of life together as men, and nothing else, in the Temple where they can talk and not fight; where they can discuss and not dispute; where each man may learn the point of view of his fellow.

Such is the scene which Masonry has prophesied for ages: such is the teaching which Masonry has given for centuries: such is the way which Masonry has pointed out through history. And, the way of Masonry is wise.

No social seer; no teacher of religion; no nation builder can afford to ignore this way, — the way leading to the Temple of Humanity.

This is the great secret of Masonry which everybody knows and which Masonry wants everybody to know: Masonry wants everybody to know what it is. What is Masonry? Masonry is the activity of closely united men, who employing symbolical forms borrowed from architecture, work for the welfare of mankind: these closely united men, who form the fraternity called Masonry, are striving morally to ennoble themselves and others: thereby, they are striving to bring about a universal league of mankind, which they aspire to exhibit even now on a small scale.

The question is often asked: since Masonry has such wise ways and such noble aims and such heroic advocates, why does the new order of things take so long in coming? What is it that, so, tragically delays the march of man toward the better social order where of every mason dreams? What causes the halt in the betterment of mankind? Masonry has an answer to these questions. Masonry says: "The reason why progress in the spirit of democracy and of fellowship of man with man is slow, is, because there are not enough men fine enough of soul, large enough of sympathy, sweet enough of spirit, and noble enough of nature to make the dream come true." There are too many men who try to build on indolence, impurity, injustice, meanness of spirit, aggressiveness of authority, and jealousy. Long ago; Ibsen, a great dramatist, wrote a drama showing us how The Pillars of Society rest on weak foundations. Naturally the foundations can not bear the burden of the heavy building; the foundations give way: down comes the structure, wounding not only the guilty but also the innocent in the wreck caused by the downfall.

But, long before Ibsen, the same thought was anticipated by the author of the "Book of Proverbs". There is a Hebrew proverb which deserves attention. The proverb reads:

"Through wisdom is a house built: by understanding, it is firmly established; and by knowledge all the chambers are filled with pleasant and precious riches." (Prov. xxiv: 3, 4).

The wisdom which Ibsen aimed to teach through drama; the wisdom which our Book of Proverbs aimed to teach by means of a short rule; Masonry has been aiming to teach by means of symbols and signs; it has been showing the world right along throughout the centuries, that the House of Wisdom must be founded upon nothing else than Faith, Truth, Relief.

When these foundations are overlooked; when these foundations are not there, the House must topple over; the house must fall when the floods descend and the winds beat upon it.

What we need, today, to make our social dreams come true is not more laws, not more dogmas, not less liberty, but better men, cleaner minded, more faithful; men with loftier ideals and more heroic integrity; men who love the right, honor the truth, worship purity, and prize liberty; upright men who meet all horizontals at a perfect angle. Such men assure the virtue and stability of the social order. To such men brotherhood is not a mere word signifying nothing; to them, brotherhood is a circle, fostering friendship, refining ideals, and enlarging sympathies; to them, brotherhood is a sort of "service-station"; it serves society; it serves the state; it serves the land; it serves every worthy cause. In a word, men such as I described latterly, always hold brotherhood in high esteem. The spirit of men such as I latterly described formed the theme of many a parable and story for the rabbis of Midrashic and Talmudic times.

There is a well known story of our sages which strikingly illustrates the thought presented this evening.

There were once two brothers, who possessed adjoining fields, which they had inherited from their father. One year, the crops were bad. Famine and starvation threatened.

One night, as the elder brother lay upon his bed, he thought to himself: "My brother is younger than I; he needs his strength more. I shall rise and go to my field; I shall take of my sheaves and put them in his field. As he thought, so he did. He took of his sheaves and put them in his younger brother's field.

The same night, the younger brother, lying upon his bed, thought to himself, "My brother is older than I. He is married; his needs are greater than mine. I shall rise and go to my field. I shall take of my sheaves and put them in my elder brother's field. As he thought, so he did; he took of his sheaves and put them in his elder brother's field.

In the morning, each found to his surprise, that in some mysterious way the sheaves, which he had put in the other's field, had returned whence they came. The next night, the incident was repeated; and again, on the third night. But, on this night, it happened that the two brothers went out to their fields at the same time. When they saw what each was doing, they kissed each other and wept for joy.

The act was so pleasing to God, so the rabbis conclude the story, that later the field, sanctified by the love of the two brothers, was deemed worthy to become the site of the great and beautiful Temple of Solomon.

Indeed, the Temple of Solomon proclaimed the broader and grander conception of brotherhood. It proclaimed the conception of universal brotherhood. It proclaimed the ideal of the universal Fatherhood of God and the universal Brotherhood of Man.

This same lofty conception of brotherhood must be proclaimed by every Lodge throughout the world. every Lodge throughout the world must emphasize this essential factor; every one must be mindful of the truth that the world was meant to be the home for us all.

Exhibition of Sculpture by Chana Orloff at the Toronto Art Gallery

Chana Orloff, an exhibition of whose sculpture is being held at the Toronto Art Gallery, was born in the Ukraine in 1888. In 1910 she entered the French Ecole des "Arts Decoratifs" to study decorative design. Although it was soon apparent that her bent was in the direction of sculpture, she continued to evince a strong decorative trend in her chosen field. Lay off her modernity of subject and stylisms of technique, her work is firmly rooted in the Russian tradition. She has been associated with the modern movement in Paris since she first exhibited in the Salon d'Automne in 1913. A supporter of the modern ideal, she was one of the leading spirits in the Paris International Decorative Arts Exhibition of 1925. She has held one man exhibitions at Bernheime Jeune and the Barbazanges Galleries in Paris and at the Weyhe and Stemmer Galleries in New York. Although isolated examples of her work were shown from time to time in this country, her first one man exhibition was held in New York in 1929. In 1930 Chana Orloff was made a member of the Legion of Honour in recognition of her distinguished contribution to modern art. She is represented at the Art Gallery of Toronto by nine examples this month.

Among friends of hers in Canada are Louis Litoff, K.C., of Montreal, and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Goldberg (Regina Seidel), of Montreal, both [illegible]

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor,
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

How Jews have sometimes been prevented from administering discipline toward wrong-doers among their number was brought out in an interview between a reporter for the Jewish World, London, England, and Paul Link, President of the Federation of Jewish Societies, and professor of the National Industrial College at Buenos Aires, who was visiting in London.

Mr. Link said that the 200,000 Jews living in Buenos Aires have two large synagogues, numerous smaller ones, a hospital, a boys' orphanage and the various charitable organizations to be found in a large community. They were practically free of anti-Semitic feeling toward them until the discovery that a certain Jewish society registered as charitable was in reality engaged in the white slave traffic. Then at one time, as a result, the expulsion of Jewish students at the University was demanded. Of 400 members of the society in question 120 were arrested and the remainder escaped. In engaging in the white slave trade these Jews were participating along with many non-Jews in an established business which has given Argentina and its capital city an evil reputation.

Anxious to keep the record of the community clean, a committee of Jewish citizens was formed under the leadership of the most prominent rabbi to fight the white slave traffic. It functioned for several years but finally gave up the fight. The white slave trade went on with both Jews and non-Jews to prosper from it. The Committee found that any activity on the part of the Jewish community to put a stop to the disgraceful trade was construed by the outside world as a confession that the trade was confined to Jews. The Committee's efforts only served to accentuate the existence of a criminal element in the community. It learned the painful lesson that the whole community would be blamed for the crimes of some no matter how earnest its desire to clear up the sore on the community body.

Doubtless the Jewish community of this Argentina city is not the first whose hands were tied chiefly by the willingness of the world to condemn many for the sins of the few. There must have been other occasions when the voice of the Jewish community was forced to be still and only the feet were left free for the exercise of a soft pedal policy which, though expedient, cheapens self-respect.

A judge in New York has refused the annulment of a marriage asked on the ground that the woman will not accept motherhood, because there is no law in that state which allows annulment for the reason given. Many people will find it hard to see how the couple concerned could possibly be a Jewish couple since the Jews are a people who regard childlessness as one of the greatest of calamities. But the couple is Jewish, for all that, and the husband sought divorce because his wife does not want to bear children. On the subject of child-bearing Dr. A. A. Brill says:

"Woman can only find true satisfaction in marriage when she has several children. The average married woman today either does not want any at all or she has at the most one or two. Her maternal instincts are repressed. Since her outlet in life is a meager one she becomes dissatisfied. She imagines that her husband is not paying her enough attention and she turns to some one else for romance and for the emotional satisfaction that she wants. But if she were leading a natural life, such as her grandmother led, she would find sufficient satisfaction in rearing a family. If she does not have several children she will find herself the victim of her desires. She will become neurotic and suffer a nervous breakdown.

[illegible] Her responsibilities strengthen a man's character to manhood. He has to take care of his children and that keeps him close to the world. If they are nice, [illegible] more dissatisfied. There will be a feeling of frustration with her. The truth of the matter is that she never becomes adjusted. For the normal woman life is not complete without motherhood."

This expression of opinion is of particular interest because it comes not only from a fine Hebrew scholar but from a great neurologist who is a recognized authority on the problems that arise out of love and marriage. When he speaks of the average married woman and the normal woman he does not differentiate between the Jewish and the non-Jewish in the matter of their present view of the number of children the modern family should include. Dr. Brill has placed them all together to arrive at the average which shows that nothing more nor less can be claimed for the Jewish woman than for the non-Jewish. Those who want to imagine the Jewish woman different must go on being shocked by such cases as that of the young wife who went to court to win her right to remain married but childless.

Historical Sketches

(Suggestions for these sketches will be received gratefully; also any additions or corrections.)

Among applicants for land in 1796 and 1803 were Abraham Cozzens, Benjamin Herehe, Jacob Levits, Thomas Cohen, Jacob Finkle, Abraham Hersha, Moses David, D. Jacobs, S. Phillips, David Valentine, D. Solomon, and B. Nathan. The Jews had the right to settle wherever they wished and to be tradesmen or artisans. They were not discriminated against but were early held in the highest regard. For example, David David, an active founder of the Bank of Montreal, was made a director at a meeting February 27th, 1818. He was a charter member of the Montreal Board of Trade and one of the first life governors of the Montreal General Hospital.

Canada extended full political rights to the Jews more than a quarter of a century before Britain did. The question of rights, coincided with the first Legislative Assembly, with Ezekiel Hart, an outstanding Jewish figure, as the centre of a bitter fight in the Assembly. Hart was born in Three Rivers in 1770 and died in 1849, the second son of Commissary Aaron Hart, one of the most prominent citizens. In 1807 Ezekiel Hart was elected to the Legislative Assembly. He obtained 50 votes as against 41 polled by Thomas Coffin and 10 by Mathew Bell, although Coffin tried to arouse race hatred by denouncing Hart as a Jew. However Hart was doomed to disappointment, for when he arrived at Quebec to take his seat the Parliament of Lower Canada was prorogued to be reconvened the following year.

At the reopening of the Assembly on January 29th, 1808, Hart refused to take the oath in the way it was proposed and insisted upon taking it according to Jewish custom with head covered and one hand on the Old Testament. The next morning he took his seat in the midst of agitation and protest. Hart was looked upon as an English member but the English minority and the French majority were hostile to each other and the French took this opportunity of making use of the fact that Hart was a Jew and ejected him. They thus deprived the English of a member and struck at Sir James Craig, the Governor-General, who was a friend of Hart, but, in the meantime, they also questioned the legality of a Jew sitting in Parliament. The French members held it against Hart that he could not take the oath in conformity with the Constitution and claimed that such a deputy could not represent the people.

Heated debates followed and the House finally decided to receive Ezekiel Hart's petition. They debated over this with regard to his statement about his oath for two days but finally his adversaries submitted the following resolution: "Resolved, that it is the opinion of this Committee that Ezekiel Hart, Esquire, professing the Jewish religion, cannot take a seat, nor sit, nor vote in this House." This resolution raised an unprecedented storm, declaring as it did that Jews had not the same rights as Christians. All the prejudices against Jews were aired. The Attorney-General of the Province said that while the administering of the oath in courts of justice according to Jewish custom was necessary, it was hardly necessary for a Jew to sit in the Legislative Assembly. Besides, from the Canon Law he cited a passage to the effect that all oaths must be taken upon the Evangels, thus attempting to deduce that even in English law the oath of Ezekiel Hart could not be considered valid. The real issue was the strife between the English and French factions in the House but the Jew suffered from the prejudice which was a side issue and the doors of Parliament were closed to him. It was more than a quarter of a century later before Jews were extended full political rights.

NOTES FROM DIRECTORS' REPORT

In a year in which all classes of business have encountered many difficulties, the Company has made gratifying progress. New policies paid for show an increase of $51,227,652.32, both the ordinary and group departments making substantial gains.

Total assurances in force show an increase of $462,464,542.58. This gain represents a very high rate of persistency, indicating the high value placed by our policyholders on their contracts with the Company in a period of extreme financial pressure.

The number of policies and group assurance certificates outstanding passed the million mark during the year.

The total net income shows an increase of $13,804,544.54.

The total payments to policyholders and beneficiaries since organization . . . equal the total assurances in force in the Company's fiftieth year ten years ago.

The mortality among our policyholders has been highly favourable.

The rate of interest earned on the mean invested assets was 6.44 per cent.

Profits paid to policyholders during the year amounted to $25,641,231.04.

In a year of almost unprecedented business depression the outstanding quality of the investments has been strikingly shown. The actual cash dividends received on the total common stocks held by the Company were $969,103.84 in excess of the dividends payable on those identical shares in 1929 . . . Even on the basis of the low prices at the close of the year our common stock holdings show a substantial excess of market value over cost.

Profits to policyholders entitled to participate during the ensuing year will be again allotted on the scale at present in operation.

The special Maturity Dividend is also continued on the basis announced last year.

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal, Associate Contributing Editor

A DARINGLY CONCEIVED BOOK

Ludwig Lewisohn's "Last Days of Shylock" is a daringly conceived and masterfully executed book. It may be regarded as an answer to Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice". For Lewisohn's historic novel takes up the threads of Shakespeare's story and presents Shylock against the actual background of 16th century Venetian life in all its splendor and despotism. Lewisohn enumerates the factors which prompted Shylock to seek revenge. He therefore vividly paints the suffering of Israel at the hands of the non-Jewish population in Mediaeval Italy.

What surprises us most in reading the book is to find therein, an intimation, that Lewisohn no longer conceives of Palestine as the final solution to the Jewish problem. How else explain Shylock's failure in the attempt to rebuild ancient Tiberias even with the aid and protection of the Sultan and the Turkish armies? How else interpret Shylock's assertion (in regard to strife with the Arabs in Palestine): "It will bring us no good. I know that; aye, I know it. And this look you, is what I have foreseen and feared: resistance and vengeance, guilt and blood. And now are our hands no longer clean, and we are made a strife unto our neighbours. Not thus will men declare the name of the Lord in Zion and his praise in Yerushalaim. Not thus."

Lewisohn, rightly, is of the opinion that salvation for the Jew will come not from the material world of "mandates" and "declarations", but rather from the world of ideals.

Thus he puts the following remarkable utterance in the mouth of Joseph Nasi—"I am beginning to believe that there exists in truth two worlds. There is the world of the senses which is naught but tumult and sinfulness and evil and which can not be saved or even touched by anything within itself or partaking of it and its qualities, and there is another world, the intelligible and eternal world of values and ideas in which it is given us to dwell with our better part and it is possible that from this eternal world influences may be made to stream into the world of senses and touch it and heal it and mayhap save it in the end of days. Therefore, my friends, I see no longer in every [illegible] trees or looms in the East—for, as seen the intelligible world. All else is dross. From the intelligible world the Messiah must come, not from this sensible world of injustice and hatred and folly".

The solution, in other words, to the suffering and tribulation of the Jew is to be found in the spiritual enlightenment of all mankind. When mankind will emancipate itself from hate; when man will learn that wealth and power are vain and that justice and forgiveness bring about human happiness—then, and then only, will Israel's problem be solved.

THE PILOT DOESN'T WORRY

FIFTY below in the Arctic night—and a plane down, with a defective spark plug and an empty tank.

The spark plug can be replaced, but that won't help without gasoline to turn the motor—and the nearest "town" is a few Eskimos and a trading post across the lake at Blackfish Point.

But the pilot doesn't worry. He knows there is a cache of Imperial Gasoline at Blackfish, and someone there to help him.

The great wealth of Canada's north is being found from the air many years before it could be reached afoot, because men are willing to adventure and supplies are there when they are needed.

These supplies come from the Imperial Oil Refineries. By ship up through Hudson Strait into the Bay, by rail beyond the Pas, by paddle wheeler down the Peace and MacKenzie Rivers they go to distributing points. In winter, dog teams and sleds drag them further into the wilderness.

For fifty years Imperial Oil has been meeting the new needs of transportation and industry. Because it has met each need with enterprise and energy, Imperial has become a great company—serving every corner of Canada—its ships on the Atlantic and Pacific—its pipe-lines in the tropics.

Fifty years of constant enterprise are in the products Imperial Oil sells today.

Marvelube is Imperial's finest motor oil.

Imperial Premier and Imperial Ethyl are its best gasolines.

Which means that nothing finer can be put in your car.
